

WHAT TO LOOK OUT FOR

Glyn Vale boasts a wealth of wildlife habitats. Unusual species are found here, including some that are nationally rare.

▲ Locally, the yellow vetchling is only known to grow here and at Ashton Court.

▲ Look for the bullfinch at the woodland edge.

GLYN VALE

Circular Walk Directions

The walk is described in a clockwise direction.

Path is mostly suitable for prams.

Can be muddy/waterlogged in parts.

From The Park, turn left along Daventry Rd, past the mini roundabout to Melvin Square. Cross road at zebra crossing and pass along the front of the shops. Bearing right into Galway Rd/Carpenter's Place, continue to T-junction with Kenmare Rd. Take the lane (opposite right) next to house number 110. 1.

Entering the site opens up vast views of the city. Take the path beside the horse paddock. 2.

To the right is Doorstep Green amphitheatre.

Note the large metal teasels throughout the site, the signature entrances and the sponsor slab. 3. Keeping to the downward rustic path ahead, look for activity in the bird and bat boxes in the woodland alongside.

horseradish

Look for naturalised horseradish, strawberries and mint left over when the site was turned over to allotments in WW2.

	Amphitheatre

Carry on down to the sometimes dry stream through the remnant ancient hedgerow 4. and past the forested area used by schools and groups for forest school and bushcraft sessions. Amble along the path with a teasel to the right, noting the variety of trees. Some detective work here will reveal the compass point, identity board and signature gateway. 5.

From this point take the upward slope. This stretch has a wide variety of flora throughout the year including the nationally rare yellow vetchling.

Carry on up the path. Where the path becomes more level, as you reach a wide opening to the right, 6. you can walk off-path through to the 'goat field' opening.

Either follow the track along the escarpment to 92 Kenmare Rd 7. and return to entry point. OR back track to the path 6. and follow uphill to the kissing gate 1. entrance and follow right hand along Kenmare Rd.

Alternative detour: Leave the site at 8. Turn left back on to Kenmare Rd and left again for Daventry Rd.
